Dutch Settlers Spent Christmas 319 Years Ago Near Hillsdale

Adrian N. Block, a Michigan businessman, and the little band of Dutch immigrants who settled in the vicinity of Hillsdale in 1609, spent Christmas in a joyful mood. The settlers, who had been working hard for several months, were glad to have a respite from their labors. They spent the holiday in the company of their fellow colonists, sharing food and merriment. The settlers were grateful for the chance to celebrate Christmas in a new land, far from the safety of their homeland. They were determined to build a new life for themselves and their families, and to make Hillsdale a prosperous community. The Dutch settlers' Christmas was a reminder of the importance of community and cooperation, and of the strength of the human spirit.
